How to site and hang your bird feeder and frustrate the squirrels

Frustrated and hungry squirrels will tirelessly seek out any opportunity of a vantage point from which they can bypass the mechanism of this feeder and leap directly onto the nut cage. Therefore, you must hang it so that the squirrels can ONLY approach from above.

If the garden doesn't offer an obvious 'safe' hanging point, then suspending the feeder beneath a horizontal wire slung between two points in the garden is the best way to site it. Ensure that you have good clearance all around the feeder – no branches, trees, bushes, fences, buildings or garden furniture etc. within 1.5m (5 feet), and place the feeder at least 1.35m (4½ feet) above the ground. Wherever you hang your feeder, be certain to use the supplied wire to suspend the feeder at least one foot below the hanging point.

A little thought and careful following of these instructions now, will reward you with the guaranteed satisfaction of beating the squirrels and ensuring your garden birds are still fed their favourite peanuts.

How to fill your Squirrel Proof Feeder

1. Grasp the top of the feeder, holding the top end of the metal tube between thumb and forefinger (see illustration).
2. Hold the nut cage, push it up and twist it through 90° (a quarter-turn), then pull it gently down.
3. Fill the nut cage to within 12 mm (½ inch) of the top with peanuts.

Maintenance

Occasionally wipe the stainless steel tube clean and apply to it a few drops of thin oil to ensure long-lasting efficient operation.
